Session 12 The Law's Blessing and Curse

Bible Passage Deuteronomy 10:12-22; 11:1, 26-28

The Law is for Our Good (Deut. 10:12-22)

- In Deuteronomy 10, we can see that Moses indicated a number of truths about the law. First, the law reveals the greatness and goodness of God. Notice how Moses spoke about God in these verses 14, 15, 17, 18, 22.
- We see specific guidelines on what the Lord meant when He asked His redeemed people to love Him "with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your strength" (Deut. 6:5). Here are the ways that the law guided Israel's understanding of what it means to love God: Fear the Lord (10:12,20). Walk in all His ways (10:12,13). Worship the Lord (10:12,20). Circumcise your hearts (10:16).
- We tend to think of regulations as unnecessarily confining and restricting. But rightly understood, rules do not oppose freedom; they make freedom possible. A home without any rules would mean that the loudest, strongest-willed child would rule the roost, leaving everyone else to no longer have the freedom of a happy, well-balanced home. God's people need guidelines for their life.
  - What are the dangers of focusing on God's law apart from His goodness?
  - Have you experienced moments when you realize that God gave you the law for your good? (ex: giving to the needy, forgiving, etc.)
  - Why is it important to see God's commands as flowing from His character?

The Law Requires Perfection (Deut. 11:1)

- God gave the law to people whom He had already redeemed. The commands of God were never, ever, intended by God as a way to earn salvation. The law was meant as a blessing for the good of God's people.
- But what if the Israelite people misunderstood? What if they came to think that by doing the works of the law, they earned favor with God or even merited salvation? It is not surprising that many Israelites made this mistake. Unquestionably, as sinful humans we suppose that by our own deeds we earn divine favor. As can be easily observed, most of the world's religious activities can be understood as an attempt to work one's way to God.
- In Deuteronomy 11:1 Moses noted the strictness of the law. Notice the term "always." The demands of the law were relentless. There was no time off for good behavior. The essence of living under the demands of the law is that it requires perfection. And because no one is capable of perfectly obeying the law, all have broken it. In fact, by knowing the strict demands of the law, human beings actually become more and more aware of how far short of perfection they have come.
- Each of us is inclined to disobedience. We are rebels against God and therefore justly under His curse. In the fullness of time, Jesus came and took the curse for us. Thus all who are in Christ are set free from the eternal condemnation that the law decreed against us.
  - Do you feel happiness of freedom from eternal condemnation? How does it reveal in your life?
  - How has this session challenged the way you understand God's commands in your own life?
